The New Oxford Fire Company will hold an old-time fair and bazaar in St. Mary's Rectory Hall on North Peters street on the evenings of Oct. 27, 29, 30 and 31 for the benefit of a new fire truck. There will be good music and fine attractions every night. Eat and drink of all kinds. That New Oxford is sadly in need of a fire truck goes without saying and everybody in the community therefore is urged to back the coming fair to the limit. A good time will be in store for one and all. Boost the fair and the new fire truck for all you are worth Glady's father is a colonel on the staff of the governor, and on a recent occasion she saw him, in brave array, on his way to attend a social function given by the governor.

"How did you like your father in his uniform?" the colonel asked his small daughter that night.

"You looked handsomer than any one else," said Gladys, loyally, "and you held your head up as high. But I think they were mean not to let you have a drum to play on!"—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

GIRLS.

The way they act shows love is blind, And makes one jealous as Othello; For when they fall in love, you find It's always with the other fellow.

More in Evidence.

At Mary's lamb We do not longer laugh; Interest now Is all in Mary's calf.

Drama's Decline.

An old actor was wont to claim that he had worked with Booth and Barrett. When questioned about his parts he would always answer: "I did hoof-beats," then add: "The drama has gone to pot."

"Why so?" some of the younger generation would indignantly inquire.

"Anyone can do the honks nowadays," was the sad reply.

An Oversight.

"My doctor put me on a rigid diet, but he said I could eat all the spinach I wanted."

"Well?"

"The darned fool evidently didn't know that I like spinach!"—Wayside Tales.

Grows Both Ways.

Laborer—I'd like to get some time off to get a haircut.

Foreman—A haircut! On company time?

Laborer—Well, don't it grow on company time?

My Word!

First Club Member—I don't think he'll do for our organization. He's terribly old-fashioned.

Second Club Member—Yes, I understand he still cranks his car.

Nothing Serious, We Hope.

The Missionary—I hope, Mrs. Baldowsky, that you and your husband are living together in harmony.

Mrs. Baldowsky—Ach, nein. Ve are living in de Gheddo.

Dun.

"Why do you avoid that firm?"

"They dun me."

"You mean they did you?"

"No, they dun me. Hound me with a bill collector every week."

No Dieting.

Mrs. Stouter—My land of living, how did you manage to reduce?

Mrs. Nowslim—We moved to a smaller apartment.

HIS IDEA.

She: They say that the love of money is the root of—

He: Yes—I know—of most matrimony.

Candidacy.

There is one endless task we see. When one election's o'er The lucky man prepares to be A candidate some more.

His Specialty.

"Does Wombat play golf?"

"Oh, yes."

"I never hear him talk about it."

"He merely plays it."

Silly Question.

Mr. Fusser—Aren't you nearly ready?

Mrs. Fusser—I wish you'd stop asking me that question. I've been telling you the last hour that I'd be ready in a minute.

Lagniappe.

Joy-riding on promissory notes is a fine way to skid.

Hope springs eternal, and these days it needs springs.

Every day is Sunday to the reformer.

Only death is certain and even that has elements of doubt.

His Views.

"Then you want woman to vote?"

"By all means. This will occupy her mind and she won't have so many other things to howl for."

NOT TO BE COAXED

A Highlander from Tobermory asked at the Oban railway station the price of a ticket to Killin. "Hoot awa," replied Donald; "it's far ower dear. I'd rather work!" and off he started. He had not proceeded far when the train came tearing along, whistling as it neared a station.

"Ye needna whistle for me," said Donald. "I made ye an offer aince, and ye wadna tak' it; sae you can gang on. I'm comin'!"—Canadian Magazine.

Either Way.

"Miss Soniervain, will you be mine?"

"Never."

The young man was disappointed, but not wholly discouraged.

"Well, will you let me be yours?" he asked.—London Tit-Bits.

GUARD LOSES LIFE AFTER HURLING FIVE TO SAFETY

Former New York Policeman Killed After Rescuing Workers From Path of Speeding Train.

New York.—Their safety in the hands of "Big Jack" Gilmartin, forty-one, former New York city policeman, whose duty it was to blow a whistle and warn them of approaching trains, ten trackmen were repairing the New York Central railroad at Park avenue and One Hundred and Sixty-sixth street when Gilmartin heard the roar of an inbound train.

He whistled. The ten sprang to the opposite track. Gilmartin then saw that the train, an electric express, had taken the track upon which they stood and was racing toward them. He shouted. The roar of the train drowned his cries.

Five of the gang saw the train and jumped to safety. Gilmartin and the other five were trapped with only a second to act.

Gilmartin leaped forward and hurled the five flat on the ground beside the rails. An instant later he was hit and thrown high in the air, but all of his men were saved.

He was dead when his comrades picked him up. The train went on, the motorman unaware of the accident. Police found the ten trackmen, several of them sobbing, bending over their heroic guardian.

Murderer's Skeleton and Confession Found in Cabin

Hagerstown, Md.—Stained and brittle from resting 40 years in its niche, subject to the elements, the confession of a murderer, Lee Singleton, a native of Crisfield, Md., and some fifty years a resident of this city, was found recently in a crevice between the logs of a cabin in Culver canyon, near Eureka, Nev., by James Thornton, a surveyor, according to word received here.

Lying in the cabin bunk was a man's skeleton, a gold watch, engraved with the initials "L. R. S." and a watch chain, from which hung a large silver nugget.

Following are portions of the confession which could be deciphered: "After 14 years of wandering I am back in the cabin which I built six years ago. Surely, those six years of hell should go toward the final reckoning. I wonder if any one will ever read this, or will it rot beside me."

"Seems if I could lie down easier if I write out that which I could not dare whisper since I done it. My name is Lee Singleton, born in Crisfield, Md.; enlisted in the Southern army, was wounded twice and served until the close of the war, when my parents died."

"I landed in Eureka in 1871, where I went to work as a feeder in the Richmond furnace. My companion was one John Murphy, an overbearing man. He insulted me on several occasions, being much stronger and a bully. He struck me one day. Murphy signed his death warrant then and there."

"I waited two weeks for my opportunity, and when it finally presented itself I struck him on the head with my shovel and threw his body into that roaring inferno. As the charge of charcoal sank he was soon out of sight. I seemed as if every shovelful of ore flung into the feed hole of the furnace struck Murphy's body, and the bubbling of the blast took to itself speech and upbraided me for my wickedness."

Freak of Nature Beautifies Cataract in Washington

Longmire, Wash.—A freak of nature has changed the face of Narada falls so that visitors returning to view the cataract barely recognize it. During the past winter a large fir log fell over the crest and in dropping lodged between two rocks just over the brim. The tumbling waters of Paradise river which form Narada falls now strike this log in such a manner as to spread out in a five-finger formation which, according to Mount Rainier devotees, enhances the beauty of the falls.

Mud Wasps Build Nests in Grandfather's Clock

Lansdale, Pa.—Mud wasps, several nests of them, were the cause of stopping an old grandfather's clock, the property of Frank S. Gottshalk of York avenue.

The clock had kept correct time for years until a few days ago, when it began to show symptoms of internal disorders. Upon investigation it was found there were several nests of wasps inside, which were playing havoc with the works.

Seven-Year-Old Boy Saves Baby From Burning Home

Orlando, Fla.—Frank Eaton, a seven-year-old lad of this city, proved himself a hero when he saved his two-year-old sister from their home, which was in flames.

Frank's parents, who were attending their dairy trade at the time, saw their home in flames and rushed to the scene, only to find entrance impossible. As they returned to the front of the house, they met the boy coming out, his baby sister in his arms.

Stratford, Conn.—Physicians said that Jack R. Leany, seven years old, of this city lived five hours after his pulse stopped throbbing. Stimulants were used to keep life in his body.

CONVICT'S LOVE FOR SON COSTLY

Kansas City Auto Thief Sacrifices Freedom for Glimpse of His Child.

MUST SERVE 20 YEARS

Kansas City, Mo.—Twenty years behind the grim, gray walls of the Oklahoma state penitentiary was the price Freddie O'Neil knew he would have to pay when he came to Kansas City a few days ago.

But Freddie, notorious motorcar thief and bad man, didn't care.

For Freddie, what e'er the cost, wanted to see a little lad, on whose chubby face he had not laid eyes in three years.

Freddie, quarry of police all over the continent since he escaped from the McAlester penitentiary last February, was captured recently in the soft drink place of Harvey Leopold, Fifteenth street and the Blue river, where he was bartender. George McNally and A. W. Cruger, city detectives, recognized him there.

Was Crafty Auto Thief.

Freddie is only thirty-three, but his shoulders are bent from the burden of his transgression. Weary and dejected.

His Little Face Hovered Before Me.

ed now, he is a different man from the one who was known here five years ago as the crafty and elusive motorcar thief.

To Lieut. L. R. Toyne, superintendent of the motorcar theft bureau, O'Neil told his story. But he didn't tell all.

"Well, Freddie," Toyne prompted, "you haven't told us yet what brought you back to Kansas City. Didn't you know you were bound to be sneezed?"—underworld parlance for arrested sooner or later.

O'Neil hung his head and kept silent.

"You just couldn't stay away, could you?" the lieutenant pressed.

"No," the prisoner replied dully. "It wasn't that. I could have stayed away as far as Kansas City is concerned. I didn't think you coppers would recognize me. But I'd have come back here anyway. It didn't make any difference."

Tells of Love for Son.

Then Freddie told the story of his love for his seven-year-old son.

"All the time I was in the stir his little face hovered before me," he said. "It was awful! I would wake up from a dream in which he had his arms around my neck and hear him call, 'Daddy.'"

"That's what brought me back, fellows," he mumbled, his eyes welding with tears.

"He didn't know you, did he, Freddie?" asked Toyne.

"Yes, he did, too! The little fellow knew me as soon as I started across the yard from the car. He knew me all right."

"It was worth the chance I took—and more too."

O'Neil declined to say where the child was, except:

"He's living with a good family in a good home."

Caught in a rat on Leopold's place a short time ago, O'Neil spent the night in a cell at police headquarters.

But the next morning he was released and departed. He had not been recognized.

Recluse Who Ended Life Secreted $15,000 in Can

Owensboro, Ky.—Atwell Haines, recluse, who lived in a cabin in a remote section of the country, committed suicide with a shotgun after telephoning friends of his intent. When they arrived he was dead. He had made a small fortune by growing ginseng root and when none of this money was found in banks the cabin was searched.

A small crack in the ceiling was noticed. Prying at this caused a small trapdoor to open, and in the attic in a tin milk can $15,000 was found. Haines left no will. His four brothers and four sisters will get his estate.

"I tell you yet again, Banquo's buried; he cannot come out on's grave." —Macbeth.

"That the dead are seen no more," writes Samuel Johnson, "I will not undertake to maintain, against the concurrent and varied testimony of all ages and of all nations. There is no people, rude or learned, among whom apparitions of the dead are not related and believed. This opinion, which perhaps prevails as far as human nature is diffused, could become universal only by its truth; those that never heard of one another would not have agreed in a tale which nothing but experience can make credible. That it is doubted by single cavaliers can very little weaken the general evidence; and some who deny it with their tongues confess it by their fears."

The great majority of ghosts are, of course, frauds; but research organization has ever been able to prove that all ghosts are frauds. No one has yet proved that Lady Macbeth was right when she asserted that Rango could not come out of his grave.

The subject of ghosts is of interest because of its bearing on the subject of the immortality of the soul. If ghosts exist, then obviously the soul does not die at the same time that the body dies. Although Socrates, by masterly reasoning, convinced himself of the immortality of the soul, and although all the great religious teachers have taught the immortality of the soul, there are many who have not been convinced; because, as Plato quotes Cebes as saying, "In what relates to the soul, men are apt to be incredulous; they fear that when she leaves the body her place may be nowhere, and that on the very day of death she may be destroyed and perish—immediately on her release from the body, issuing forth like smoke or air and vanishing away into nothingness."

Socrates was of the opinion that the soul that was pure at death would not return as a ghost. Such a soul was totally severed from the body, at death, and gathered herself into herself, in a state that seems analogous to the Buddhist's Nirvana, of which Arnold wrote:

The aching cross to live ends, and life glides—
Lifeless—to nameless quiet, nameless joy,
Blessed NIRVANA—sinless, stressless rest—
That change which never changes!

Socrates believed, however, that few souls are pure at death. For most of us, "each pleasure and pain is a sort of nail which nails and rivets the soul to the body." Most souls love the body and dread the invisible existence to which pure souls go. These are the souls that may be seen "proving about tombs and sepulchers," made visible to our eyes by the alloy and impurity that cling to the soul as a result of the love of life and of the body.

"But life, being weary of these worldly bars, Never lacks power to dismiss itself." —Julius Caesar.

"Why is suicide held not to be right?" was one of the questions put to Socrates during that last long talk he had with his friends while he waited for his jailer to bring him the cup of poison.

According to Plato's account, Socrates answered: "I suppose you wonder why . . . when a man is better dead he is not permitted to be his own benefactor, but must wait for the hand of another. . . . I admit the appearance of inconsistency, but there may not be any real inconsistency, after all, in this. There is a doctrine uttered in secret that man is a prisoner who has no right to open the door of his prison and run away; this is a great mystery which I do not quite understand."

Our western laws and churches hold suicide to be wrong, and there is a general feeling that when a man commits suicide, he breaks the rules by which the game of life is played. We know that in a race, for example, a man is expected to finish the course, even though all the other runners have crossed the line an hour before him. To the bystanders there seems no sense in this. To them it seems that after enough men have crossed the line to score all the points that can be scored, the other runners should be allowed to step over the side lines and quit the race. They cannot see any reason for making a man run after all chances of scoring seem over; but the trainer sees reason in the proceedings. Life is frequently likened to a race.

Some people hold that the two cases are not analogous because the player enters a race voluntarily and we human beings are born into life without our consent. Others hold that we do enter life voluntarily. The latter believe, with Socrates and the Buddhists, in the transmigration of the soul. They insist that the soul that does not wish for life is not reincarnated.

This is, of course, a subject about which nobody knows, though many may speculate, trying to twist texts this way and that to suit their own beliefs.

A MAN WHO BECAME FAMOUS

Doctor R. V. Pierce, whose picture appears above, was not only a successful physician, but also a profound student of the medicinal qualities of Nature's remedies, roots and herbs, and by close observation of the methods used by the Indians, he discovered their great remedial qualities, especially for weaknesses of women, and after careful preparation succeeded in giving to the world a remedy which has been used by women with the best results for half a century. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is still in great demand, while many other so-called "cure-alls" have come and gone. The reason for its phenomenal success is because of its absolute purity, and Dr. Pierce's high standing as an honored citizen of Buffalo is a guarantee of all that is claimed for the Favorite Prescription as a regulator for the ill peculiar to women.

16,500,000 Books Printed.

Basing conclusions on what is considered reliable data, an English librarian estimates that since the invention of printing in Europe in the Fifteenth century the output of the world's book presses has amounted to about 16,500,000 titles, of which some 4,400,000 have been printed since 1900. The librarian believes that perhaps 20,000 of all the books printed still possess value.—Scientific American.

LESSON FOR OCTOBER 28

SOME MISSIONARY TEACHINGS OF THE PROPHETS

LESSON TEXT—Isa. 60:1-3; Jonah 4:10-11; Micah 4:1-3; Zeph. 3:9.

GOLDEN TEXT—"The Gentiles shall come to thy light, and kings to the brightness of thy rising."—Isa. 60:3.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Story of Jonah.

JUNIOR TOPIC—God's Love for All Nations.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Prophets as Missionaries.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Missionary Message of the Prophets.

Perhaps the best way to teach this lesson will be to note the message of the individual prophets.

I. The Message of Isaiah (Isa. 60:1-3).

1. Its Central Fact (v. 1). Israel's light, her Redeemer, has come. The primary meaning of this is not the incarnation of the Redeemer, but His manifestation in glory and power as He comes back to this earth to reign as Israel's King. This glorious fact is presented under the figure of a bright sunrise. It will be a glorious morning without clouds dawning upon a dark world.

2. The Ringing Summons (v. 1). Messiah himself calls Israel to arouse herself from her long sleep of indifference and shine forth in the glory of her glorious king.

3. The Darkened Earth (v. 2). In spite of all the progress of the arts and sciences spiritual darkness—blindness touching spiritual things—has settled down upon the earth. It will be peculiarly gross in the last days. It can only be dispelled by the glorious appearing of the Lord.

4. The Blessed Result (v. 3). The Gentile nation shall come into the light, being attracted to Zion by the appearing of the Lord. In the midst of such darkness the sudden appearing of the light shall attract the nations and draw them to Jerusalem.

II. The Message of Jonah (Jonah 4:10, 11).

Jonah was commanded by the Lord to go to the wicked city Nineveh and proclaim its destruction in forty days. He started in the opposite direction in order to escape this unpleasant task. A storm came up and the superstitious sailors threw him overboard. He was swallowed by a great fish and after three days and nights was cast upon the shore. Having learned the needed lesson he went to Nineveh and preached with such earnestness that the whole city repented. The mercy shown by the Lord in sparing this wicked city so angered Jonah that he went out of the city and improvised a shelter where he could see whether God would really destroy Nineveh. To protect the prophet, God made a gourd to quickly spring up and throw a shade over him. When the gourd died and left Jonah exposed to the burning sun he prayed for death. The particular message of Jonah is that God is great in mercy to all the nations when they penitently turn unto Him from their sins.

III. The Message of Micah (Micah 4:1-3).

In this message the prophet portrays the blessings of the Messiah's kingdom in the last days. Three things are predicted:

1. The Supremacy of His Kingdom (v. 1). It shall be exalted above all the kingdoms of the earth. Its glory shall attract the people from afar.

2. The Extent of It (v. 2). Many nations shall come with the urgent request that others accompany them. The kingdom of Messiah shall be universal, it shall extend from sea to sea and from the river to the ends of the earth.

3. It Shall Bring Peace (v. 3). Enmity will then be taken from men's hearts and they will love each other. When their hearts are changed they will no longer wage war against each other, they will even destroy their implements of warfare. War will continue till men's hearts are regenerated. The way to get wars to cease is to get men to love Jesus Christ.

IV. The Message of Zephaniah (Zeph. 3:9).

Zephaniah declares that following the judgment upon the nations God will turn the people from their impure speech so that they may call upon Him. He declares that God's will is that all nations turn from their filthy conversation and call upon Him. He desires that all nations should come unto Him.

Must Think of Others.

Of course we know what Christ's yoke is. When He was here upon earth in the flesh, all the troubles and needs of men He took upon His own shoulders. Christ yoked Himself to the sorrows of mankind. Wherever a man was found who had trouble, whether he was crippled or blind or a leper, or a man anxious about his dying daughter, or a mother following her dead son to the grave, or in smaller matters as when some men had fished all night and caught nothing, always Christ entered into the case with sympathy and helpfulness. And if we are to take up Christ's burden and wear His yoke, we must get out of ourselves and think

CAPTAINS OF ADVENTURE

By ROGER POCOCK

RAJAH BROOKE A. D. 1841

Borneo is a hot forest about five hundred miles long, and as wide, inhabited by connoisseurs called Dyaks, keen collectors. They collect human heads and some of their pieces are said to be very valuable. They are a happy little folk, with most amusing manners and customs. Here is their ritual for burial of the dead:

"When a man dies his friends and relations meet in the house and take their usual seats around the room. The deceased is then brought in, attired in his best clothes, with a cigar fixed in his mouth; and, being placed on the mat in the same manner as when alive, his betel box is set by his side. The friends go through the form of conversing with him, and offer him the best advice concerning his future proceedings, and then, having feasted, the body is deposited in a large coffin and kept in the house for several months."

The habits of the natives have been interfered with by the Malays, who conquered most of them and carved their island up into kingdoms more or less civilized, but not managed at all in the interest of the Dyaks. These kingdoms were decayed and tumbling to pieces when the Dutch came in to help, and helped themselves to the whole of Borneo except the northwest part. They pressingly invited themselves there also, but the Malay rajah kept putting them off with all sorts of polite excuses.

While the rajah's minister was running short of excuses to delay the Dutch an English yacht arrived in Sarawak. The owner was a Mr. James Brooke, who had been an officer in the East India company, but being hit with a slug in the lungs during the first Burma war, was retired with a pension of seventy pounds for wounds. Afterward he came into a fortune of thirty thousand pounds, took to yachting, traveled a great deal in search of adventure, and so in 1839 arrived in Sarawak on the lookout for trouble.

An Englishman of gentle birth is naturally expected to tell the truth, to be clean in all his dealings, to keep his temper, and not to show his fears. The rajah sought his advice in dealing with the Dutch, the Dyaks and the pirates. The Malays, Dyaks, pirates and everybody else consulted him as to their dealings with the rajah. On his second visit he took a boat's crew from his yacht and went to the seat of war. There he tried to the verge of tears to persuade the hostile forces either to fight or make friends, and when nobody could be induced to do anything at all, he, with his boat's crew and one native warrior, stormed the Dyak position, putting the enemy to total rout and flight. Luckily, nobody was hurt, for even a cut finger would have spoiled the perfect bloodlessness of Brooke's victory. Then the Dyaks surrendered to Brooke. Afterward the pirate fleet appeared at the capital, not to attack the rajah, but to be inspected by Brooke, and when he had patted the pirates they went away to purr. Moreover, the rajah offered to hand over his kingdom to Brooke as manager, and the Englishman expected him to keep his word. Brooke brought a shipload of stores in payment for a cargo of manganese, but the rajah was so contented with that windfall that he forgot to send to his mines for the ore.

Further up the coast a British ship was destroyed by lightning and her crew got ashore, where they were held as captives pending a large ransom. Even when the captain's wife had a baby the local bigwig thereabouts saw a new chance of plunder and stole the baby-clothes. Then the shipwrecked mariners sent a letter to Brooke, appealing for his help; but nothing on earth could induce the spineless, boneless rajah to send the relief he had promised. Then Brooke wrote to Singapore, whence the East India company dispatched a warship which rescued the forty castaways.

The rajah's next performance was to arrange for a percentage with two thousand, five hundred robbers who proposed to plunder and massacre his own subjects. Brooke from his yacht stampeded the raiders with a few rounds from the big guns—blank, of course. Brooke was getting rather hard up, and could not spare ball ammunition on week-days.

So King Muda Hassim lied, cheated, stole, betrayed, and occasionally murdered—a mean rogue, abject, cringing to Brooke, weeping at the Englishman's threats to depart, holding his throne so long as the white yacht gave him prestige; but all this with pomp and circumstance, display of gems and gold, a gorgeous retinue, plenty of music and royal salutes on the very slightest pretext. But all the population was given over to rapine and slaughter, and the forest was closing in on ruined farms. The last and only hope of the nation was in Brooke.

Behind every evil in the state was Makota, the prime minister, a polite and gentlemanly rascal, and at the end of two years he annoyed Brooke quite seriously by putting arsenic in the interpreter's rice. Brooke cleared his ship for action and, with a landing party under arms, marched to the palace gates. In a few well-chosen words he explained Makota's villainy, showed that neither the rajah's life nor his own was safe, and that the only course was to proclaim Brooke as governor.

No shot was fired, no blow was struck, but Makota's party vanished, the villain fled, the rajah began to behave, the government of the country was handed over to the Englishman amid great rejoicings. "My darling mother," he wrote, "I am very poor, but I want some things from home very much; so I must trust to your being rich enough to afford them to me. Imprimis, a circle for taking the latitude; secondly, an electrifying machine of good power; thirdly, a large magic lantern; fourthly, a rifle which carries fifty balls; and last, a peep-show. The circle and rifle I want very much; and the others are all for political purposes." Did ever king begin his reign with such an act as that letter?

But, then, look at the government he replaced: "The sultan and his chiefs rob all classes of Malays to the utmost of their power; the Malays rob the Dyaks, and the Dyaks hide their goods as much as they dare, consistent with the safety of their wives and children." Brooke found his private income a very slender fund when he had to pay the whole expense of governing a kingdom until the people recovered from their ruin.

February the first, 1842, a pirate chief called to make treaty with the new king. "He inquired, if a tribe pirated on my territory what I intended to do. My answer was 'to enter their country and lay it waste.' 'But,' he asked me again, 'you will give me—your friend—leave to steal a few heads occasionally?' 'No,' I replied, 'I shall have a hundred Sakarran heads for every one you take here.' He, recurred to this request several times—'Just to steal one or two!'—as a schoolboy asks for apples."

Brooke used to give the pirates his laughing permission to go to Singapore and attack the English.

"The Santah river," he wrote, "is famous for its diamonds. The workers seem jealous and superstitious, disliking noise, particularly laughter, as it is highly offensive to the spirit who presides over the diamonds. . . . A Chinese Mohammedan with the most solemn face requested me to give him an old letter; and he engraved some Chinese characters, which, being translated, signify 'Rajah Muda Hassim, James Brooke and Hadju Ibrahim present their compliments to the spirit and request his permission to work at the mine.'"

There were great doings when the sultan of Borneo had, Mr. Brooke proclaimed king in Sarawak. Then he went off to the Straits Settlements, where he made friends with Heffy Keppel, captain of H. M. S. Dido, a sportsman who delighted in hunting pirates, and accepted Brooke's invitation to a few days' shooting. Keppel describes the scene of Brooke's return to his kingdom, received by all the chiefs with undisguised delight, mingled with gratitude and respect for their newly elected ruler. "The scene was both novel and exciting, presenting to us—just anchored in a large fresh water river, and surrounded by a densely wooded jungle—the whole surface of the water covered with canoes and boats dressed with colored silken flags, filled with natives beating their tom-toms, and playing on wind instruments, with the occasional discharge of firearms. To them it must have been equally striking to witness the Dido anchored almost in the center of their town, her mastsheads towering above the highest trees of that jungle, the loud report of her heavy thirty-two-pounder guns, the manning aloft to furl sails of one hundred-fifty seamen in their clean white dresses, and with the band playing. I was anxious that Mr. Brooke should land with all the honors due to so important a personage, which he accordingly did, under a salute."

It was a little awkward that the Dido struck a rock and sank, but she chose a convenient spot just opposite Mr. Brooke's house, so that Brooke's officers and those of the ship formed one mess there, a band of brothers, while the damage was being repaired. Then came the promised sport, a joint boat expedition up all sorts of queer back channels and rivers fouled by the pirates with stakes and booms under fire of the artillery in their hill fortresses. The sportsmen burst the booms, charged the hills, stormed the forts, burned out the pirates and obtained their complete submission.

The next adventure was a visit from the Arctic explorer, Sir Edward Belcher, sent by the British government to inspect Brooke's kingdom, now a peaceful and happy country.

Later came Admiral Sir Thomas Cochrane with a squadron to smash up a few more pirates, and the smashing of pirates continued for many years a popular sport for the navy. The pirate states to the northward became in time the British colonies of Labuan and North Borneo, but Sarawak is still a protected Malay state, the hereditary kingdom of Sir James Brooke and his descendants.

CHEVROLET

Essential to Profitable Farming

The Utility Express Truck $550 Chassis Only f. o. b. Flint, Mich.

Fits any Standard Truck Body

No business can succeed unless its product is profitably sold. Most farms have a fine production department but no sales department. They grow crops and stock bought by buyers who set the price.

One of the chief reasons for this unprofitable situation is the average farmer's poor facilities for moving his crops or stock to the place where he can sell or ship to the best advantage. Because of the time and expense of horse delivery millions of dollars worth of produce spoils annually on American farms. The saving of this waste would, in many cases, change a losing farm to a money-maker.

This low-priced, high-grade, reliable truck was designed as a money-saver and money-maker for farmers and business houses needing fast low-cost haulage of heavy or bulky goods. It fits any standard type of truck body. Ask any Chevrolet dealer for price of the style of body you require.

RAISING FAMILY —THOUGH CRIPPLED—

William J. Eden, Candidate For Register, Apparently Winning Uphill Fight.

William J. Eden, North Washington street, Gettysburg, Republican candidate for the office of register and recorder, was raised on a farm in Menallen township.

He received his preliminary education in the public schools of Menallen township and Arendtsville borough, finally completing his studies at the Lock Haven State Normal School, Lock Haven.

When a boy he had the misfortune to lose his left hand and with this handicap is endeavoring to complete the rearing of a family of six children, the youngest of which is nine years.

Four years ago, Mr. Eden was defeated for the office of register and recorder by Horace E. Smiley, the present Democratic incumbent.

In the September primary he was given 1581 votes by the Republican party.

At the present time, Mr. Eden is employed as an automobile salesman for the Plank and Bell Garage, York street. He is known as a hustler and has a pleasing personality which makes him friends wherever he is. That he would serve the public in the same manner he serves his trade is not to be doubted, those who know him say.—Advertisement.

WOMEN TO LEARN OF KU KLUX KLAN

Invitations have been received by members of the Ku Klux Klan, their friends and wives in Gettysburg and vicinity to attend two open meetings to be held in the P. O. S. of A. lodge rooms this Thursday afternoon and evening. A meeting particularly for women will be held this afternoon. Mrs. N. D. Goodwin, Mississippi, the Queen Kleagle of the Women of the Ku Klux Klan in Pennsylvania, will address the gathering on the subject "Why the Women of the K. K. K."

Rev. Dr. J. H. Hanson, prominent Baptist minister, of Pittsburgh, who addressed an open meeting for men several weeks ago in the Gettysburg P. O. S. of A. lodge rooms, will also speak to the women this afternoon. At the evening meeting, which is for men only, Rev. Dr. Hanson will again bring a message to Klansmen and their friends.

At an election held recently for a president and seven managers for Mt. Carmel cemetery, Littlestown, Howard G. Blocher was elected president for his third term. The managers elected were John R. Byers, Wm. F. Ebaugh, Wm. H. Colehouse, Chas. E. Duttera, Elmer D. Buckley, Wm. D. Nau and Geo. F. Duttera. The last was re-elected secretary, he having held this office for 30 years. Elmer D. Buckley was elected treasurer. The Board decided to paint the house, make new fence, and some other repairs.

LEAVES 81 DESCENDANTS

Frederick Winand, life-long resident of Latimore township, died from infirmities at the home of his daughter, Mrs. R. E. Fair, York Springs, on Saturday, aged 93 years, 8 months and 21 days. Death was caused by old age. He is survived by the following sons and daughters: Walter, East Berlin; William, New Oxford; E. C. East Berlin; C. E., New Chester; Mrs. R. E. Fair, Mrs. Elberta Tanger, and Mrs. Charles Gartman, of York Springs. Thirty-one grandchildren, 39 great-grandchildren and 3 great-great-grandchildren survive, also two sisters, Mrs. Eliza Leivelsperger, and Miss Lovina Winand, New Chester, and one brother, John Winand, Manchester. Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon from the home of Mrs. Fair. Interment was made at Latimore meeting house, the Rev. Chas. Baker officiating.

Three schoolgirls, inmates of the Christian Home, York, who escaped from the home on Tuesday night a week, were taken back to the institution. One of the girls, Catherine Little, 14 years old, was found Thursday at a home near York, where she had been given lodging. The other two, Teresa Guerrilama, an Italian girl, and Helena Painter, both 13 years old, were found in a York moving picture theatre Thursday evening. According to the story told by the Little girl the trio arrived in Hanover on the same night. After they reached Hanover the girls slept on a front porch, and when morning came the Painter and the Italian girls had disappeared. On Wednesday night the Little girl went to a home near York, where she was given lodging.

Sylvester Bream, 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Bream, of near Mt. Victory church, Saturday night a week was in a carriage which was almost demolished in a collision with an automobile near the residence of Peter Leer, above York Springs. Young Bream was driving towards home and the machine was going in the direction of York Springs. Bream was thrown out by the force of the collision and sustained a long gash above his left eye. The horse he was driving was uninjured. After hitting the vehicle the driver of the car, Lloyd Fanus, of Harrisburg, lost control of his machine and it crashed through a post fence but was only slightly damaged.

At the re-consecration services in the York Springs Lutheran church on Sunday a week about $50 was raised above the $240 needed to meet all outstanding obligations for renovating the edifice.

Mrs. Mary Herman, Coatesville, spent Tuesday a week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Lawrence, McSherrystown. Mrs. Herman was 72 years old on that day.

John F. Kinneman and family, Abbottstown, visited Mr. and Mrs. Kinneman's daughter, Mrs. Earl Brown, in Philadelphia, recently.

THAT DULL ACHING

Don't worry and complain about a bad back. Get rid of it! For weak kidneys, lame and aching backs, your neighbors recommend Doan's Kidney Pills. Ask your neighbor.

Mrs. Chas. Kappes, 229 N. Stratton St., Gettysburg, Pa., says: "I was feeling badly with kidney trouble. There was a dull, heavy pain in the small of my back and mornings I felt so stiff and sore it was hard for me to get around. Dizziness came on often and tiny spots blurred my vision. My kidneys were weak and as I had known of Doan's Kidney Pills for a long time I decided to try them. I got some and they rid me of the backaches and did away with the other signs of kidney trouble." 60c. at all dealers. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

NEEDLE PENETRATES HAND

Mrs. Cora Hemler, Hanover, underwent an operation at the York hospital Thursday evening for the removal of a part of a needle which became embedded in the palm of her left hand while she was scrubbing the floor at her home that morning. The object, about one-third of a needle, entered the palm at the middle finger and caused Mrs. Hemler much pain. An X-ray disclosed the location of the needle point, and Mrs. Hemler submitted to an operation at the hospital for its removal, after which Mrs. Hemler was given a tetanus antitoxin injection and returned home.

Captain Ellis H. Geiselman, who for the past year served as captain of the U. S. S. "Bittern," a mine-layer, stationed in China, has returned to the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elder J. Geiselman, of Hanover, where he will spend a 30 day leave. Captain Geiselman left Philadelphia League Island Navy Yard, in May 1920. He spent a year in Constantinople, Turkey, and visited the principal countries in that part of the world. From there he went through the Suez Canal, serving in China for a year where he was made Captain of the "Bittern." Captain Geiselman graduated from the Naval Academy in 1917. He is now unassigned, but may be sent to Annapolis as an instructor in the Naval Academy.

"Eddie C," old time idol of the Adams county racing fans, was entered in the free for all class at the York Springs matinee races on Saturday afternoon and attempted to lower his track record there of 1:28 but the best he could do was to finish in third position in the second heat when "Raley," a Carlisle horse, made the two-thirds of a mile in 1:28 1/4. Members of Troop D, 10th Cavalry, P. N. C., of Carlisle, gave a great exhibition of riding during the afternoon.

Jacob C. Henry, Hanover, employed on the construction gang of the Hanover Power Company, which is building a power line across the Pigeon Hills, Thursday had the wheels of the heavy trailer attached to the truck run over his right foot, badly cutting one of his toes and bruising it considerably. He was jolted from the truck.

While riding his bicycle in Hanover at an early hour Friday, Ira Markle, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Markle, was hit by an automobile driven by Walter B. Crowl, of Pennville, and knocked to the street. He sustained a severe sprain of the right shoulder. A cut on the leg required five stitches to close.

A car driven by H. Goldland, Lebanon, Mass., skidded on the wet road near Farmers, Friday, smashing into a pole, breaking off a front wheel and bending the fender. Mr. Goldland, the only occupant, was not injured.

R. C. Fanus, of Hanover, sustained a painful injury to his right hand when it was caught in a boring machine at the Alexander Cabinet works, Thursday.

Lillich & Kellenberger, proprietors of the Central garage, Abbottstown, are installing a larger gasoline tank and a larger pump at the garage.

H. E. Melhorn, Bonneauville, was a recent Harrisburg visitor.

NOTICE.

The First and Final account of E. H. Markley, Committee of Sadie Smith, a person of weak mind, now deceased, has been filed in the Court of Common Pleas of Adams County, Penna., and will be confirmed on the 12th day of November A. GROSS ADDITIONS TO BELL TELEPHONE PLANT IN PENNSYLVANIA 1919 - 1923

This Year $30,200,000

We started the year with plans for the greatest telephone construction program ever attempted in Pennsylvania.

We expected to add twenty-five millions of dollars in new equipment to the Bell System in this state.

But the tremendously increasing demands for telephone service have forced us to revise our figures upward.

By December 31, 1923, we will have placed in one year $30,200,000 worth of new equipment, new telephones, new wire, new switchboards, new Central Office equipment, and new buildings.

And our 1924 construction program will probably run to $40,000,000.

All this in spite of the fact that the three preceding years were greater than any six years in the telephone history of the state.

We are building—building to keep pace with the demands of the people of Pennsylvania for telephone service.

ASLEEP WHILE BED BURNED

Mrs. Harry Brady, of Edgegrove, on Sunday night awoke about midnight to discover the room full of smoke and the mattress of their bedstead. Quickly arousing her husband they succeeded in beating the flames out without calling for help.
When awakened Mr. Brady found that one of his legs had been singed by the blaze as he slept. The fire was evidently caused by a defective flue near the bed. Mr. and Mrs. Brady and family only occupied the house since Tuesday, having purchased the store and property from Mrs. Devine. The fire loss is estimated at about $20.

Arrested Thursday night in Gettysburg, charged with disorderly conduct, four men were given hearings before Justice Hill, Friday, and released after paying fines and costs.
William S. Shields, Sr., and Maurie
Fitz, two of those arrested, paid fines of $5 each, while Roy Eyer and Geo.
Ashbaugh paid $1 apiece. Total costs in the four actions amounted to $18-
50. The arrests were made by State
Trooper Hughes and Chief Weikert.

Ministers of Frederick, Md., took matters into their own hands at the Frederick Fair last week and, headed by Rev. G. Ellis Williams, swooped down on the midway, ordered the arrest of six owners of chance wheels, and demanded the closing of all games of chance and booths where forms of gambling for baby dolls, baskets of fruit and other articles were in progress.

According to word received from
St. Joseph's hospital, Lancaster, slow but steady progress toward recovery is being made by Randall E. Mullen, Toronto, Canada, the Gettysburg college freshman, who suffered a compound fracture of the skull in the automobile accident, October 6, when William G. Hollinger, Hanover, was fatally injured.

The B. Bible class of Heidelberg
Reformed church, York, Prof. Chas.
B. Heinley, teacher, conducted a pilgrimage to the Hoffman orphanage, near Littlestown, Sunday afternoon.
Upwards of 100 people made the trip.
The Sunday school orchestra and several members of the choir assisted in the program rendered at the home.

ters in Philadelphia of the 79th Div.
O. R. C., announce the promotion of Henry R. Konard, Hanover, from 1st lieutenant to captain. Capt. Konard will continue in his present assignment to the 316th Inf.

Thursday afternoon, while leaving the Abbottstown grammar schoolroom, Kathryn Hafer fell and broke a bone and dislocated the third knuc-kle of the little finger of her right hand.

The Rev. Geo. H. Eveler, Little-town, officiated at the funeral of Mrs.
Elizabeth A. Shultz at Latimore. She was a member of his former congregation at Dillsburg.

Daniel F. Pressell, Abbottstown, broke off a twig 8 inches long from an apple tree of a late winter apple which had a cluster of 14 apples on it.
Charles Albert, Abbottstown, found a bag containing nearly two bushels of wheat screenings, recently, between his home and Miller's mill.

HERE AND THERE

Sunday was rally day in the Littlestown Methodist church.

Parker Myers raised a 2-pound potato on the farm of C. T. Lerew, of York Springs, this year.

Corn ears 15 inches in length have grown, this year, on H. F. Stambaugh's farm near Pine Run.

Mrs. G. O. Thomas and son George, Labott, spent a week with Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Wildasin, Abbottstown.

The Ladies Aid society of the Abbottstown Lutheran congregation will hold an oyster supper in the Guild House, Saturday.

"The All-Inclusiveness of Salvation" was the subject of the pastor's discourse on Sunday in the Hunters-town M. E. church.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lillich, Abbottstown, gave a wedding dinner recently in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Kauffman, of York.

The sheriff's sale which was announced for Wednesday a week at the butcher shop of M. A. Cushman, at Pennville, was not held.

114 glasser and jars of jellies and preserves, 31 jars fruit, 12 cans vegetables, etc., were donated to the Warner Hospital from the ladies' auxiliary of Littlestown.

Leo Topper, aged 4 years, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Topper, of McSherrystown, fell from a porch swing to the floor, breaking his right leg between the knee and hip.

Dr. Edgar Hinkle, of Lancaster, formerly of Littlestown, is visiting his sister, Mrs. Burton M. Alteman, at Orlando, Fla., before sailing for Havana, Cuba, where he will spend the winter.

John D. Yantis, of McSherrystown, while opening a cigar box with a hammer and chisel, caused a spark which flew into his left eye, making it necessary for him to go to a physician. The injured eye is not thought to be seriously injured.

The diphtheria quarantine has been lifted from the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Mikesell, Pennville, where three children, Gordon, aged 12 years, Roy, aged 11 years, and Earl, aged 5 years, had been suffering from the disease.

Mrs. Earl Beam, near Dillsburg, was seriously burned when she poured oil on a lighted fire in a cook stove in the kitchen of her home. In coming to his wife's rescue Mr. Beam was also burned. The woman was taken to be Harrisburg hospital.

Many farmers report that some of the corn has moulded in the shocks. In some sections it is reported that labor is scarce and that farmers are paying 6 cents a bushel for husking. The husking record for the Hanover section is said to be held by a daughter of Samuel Keagy, who husked 140 bushels in one day.

The plot of land, embracing one city block in Hanover opposite Wirt Park, has been sold by the Kintzing Estate to Cornelius Dorlan, Lansford, for $14,000. Dorlan has large manufacturing interests in Summit Hill. It is understood that the purchase of the block was principally in the nature of an investment.

C. E. Tawney, the present clerk, altho he has not been in office for a great length of time, has demonstrated that he also has a knack for helping the county commissioners save and is proving to be a watchdog for the board when it comes to expenditures, says the "Star & Sentinel." Mr. Tawney is a former New Oxfordian.

DR. HANSON INAUGURATED
Gettysburg college officially started on a new career with a new president, Dr. H. W. A. Hanson, on Friday, when Dr. Hanson was officially and formally inaugurated as the eighth president of the institution and the hosts of alumni looked forward to a greater destiny for the institution. A great number of the alumni and distinguished guests gathered for the ceremony on Friday. The entire event proved a brilliant college function and one that will be preserved in picture and print in the archives of the institution, for a motion picture of the inaugural was made and will be included in the films of Pathe News and the films will be preserved among the college records.

Dr. and Mrs. Hanson were presented with a chest of silver by the council of Messiah Lutheran church, Harrisburg, whose pastorate he resigned to come to Gettysburg. It was the inaugural gift of his church. Dr. Hanson has also been given a gold watch by the colored people of Harrisburg for his efforts in behalf of the colored churches of Harrisburg. It is said that about 700 people, many of them children, contributed.

Among those attending the inauguration of Dr. H. W. A. Hanson as president of Gettysburg college were Rev. ad Mrs. Geo. N. Laufer, of Altoona, formerly of New Oxford.

The Two Taverns school will hold a masquerade Halloween social Monday at the Mt. Joy Community Hall for the benefit of the school fund. Prizes will be given to those who are the oddest dressed and the nicest dressed, in masquerade costume, under the age of 10 years, from 10 to 16 years, and 16 and over. Refreshments of all kinds will be on sale. St. Mark's Reformed church, of Two Taverns, held an oyster supper in the Community Hall on Saturday evening. The Community Association held their regular meeting on Friday evening in the Community Hall.

A Peerless sedan skidded and overturned on the Lincoln Highway, near Farmers, Friday morning, badly damaging the car. The occupants of the sedan, H. M. Shenk, of Lititz, his wife, father-in-law and daughter-in-law, escaped with minor injuries, managing to safely crawl through broken windows from the overturned car. The party was on its way to Kittanning to visit relatives.

The central piece of the large front stained glass window of St. Mary's church, McSherrystown, has been replaced by finer glass to correspond with the recently added memorial windows.

Miss Mae Sander's Taneytown, visited her home folks last week at Bonneauville.

A pleasant surprise party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Himes, of Aspers R1, in honor of their two children.

A Ford coupe owned by Rev. Fred S. Geesey, driven by his son, Paul, was badly damaged Monday night when it went over an embankment on the Lincoln Highway near Gettysburg, and upset. The driver escaped injury. One of the doors of the machine was smashed and one wheel and fender damaged and the windshield broken. The accident happened when a tire blew out and Geesey lost control of the machine.

David Blocher, Gettysburg, was fined $10 for speeding in West York on Sunday.

They Laughman moved from Abbottstown to Hanover on Friday.

In the area between the Carlisle and Abbottstown pikes, is said ring-necked pheasants are plentiful. It would be a crime however to shoot them as it is said in most cases they are tamer than chickens.

Paul Gobrecht and family, of Hanover had a thrilling experience Tuesday night when their automobile went down the road, ran down an embankment and nearly toppled over on the W. M. freight train, at Hanover. The family, seeing the freight approaching, sprang from the machine. Mr. Gobrecht ran down the tracks signaling the engineer with a small flashlight and the train was brought to a stop a few feet from the machine. The automobile was removed from the tracks by the train crew and the party was able to return home in the machine.

Rev. F. L. Stine, who was transferred from the Mont Alto U. B. church to the Gettysburg charge of that denomination by the Pennsylvania Conference of the U. B. church, preached his introductory sermon at Gettysburg United Brethren church on Sunday morning and at Salem United Brethren church in the evening.

Rev. E. H. Hummelbaugh, who for the past three years was pastor of the Gettysburg United Brethren charge, and who was transferred by the recent conference to the Mont Alto church, occupied the pulpit there on Sunday. Next Sunday, Rev. Mr. Stine and Rev. Mr. Hummelbaugh will preach their farewell sermons in their respective churches. Next week, Rev. Mr. Stine and his family will move to Gettysburg. Mr. and Mrs. Stine are each 45 years old. They have two daughters and one son, one of the girls being a teacher in the Shippensburg High School, the other a high school pupil, while the son is a Junior of Lebanon Valley college, Annville.

TRESPASS NOTICES—See apiece, 6 for 25c at the ITEM Office.

Leo Harg, of McSherrystown, bitten recently by a strange dog and threatened with blood poisoning, suffered a slight relapse.

Censorship of motion pictures through America by political appointed commissioners who are without sufficient knowledge of the work was condemned by C. C. Pettijohn, general counsel of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, speaking before the fifth district Minnesota Federation of Women's Clubs.

Mr. Pettijohn told the meeting, "a wonderful $250,000 production of Abraham Lincoln was practically ruined recently by a 19-year-old gum-chewing stenographer, a political appointee, who ordered cut from the picture the reference to Lincoln being at Gettysburg. 'Them motion picture people don't know anything,' she said. 'Lincoln never lived at Gettysburg, he lived in Illinois' and out the scene went."

Dr. F. P. Shue, Hanover veterinarian, reports that there is much "shipping disease" among cattle in this section. This disease is frequently followed by pneumonia, the doctor says, and immediate attention is necessary to save the lives of animals affected.

Earl W. Fishel, Hanover, advertises he will not be responsible for any bills contracted by his wife who left his home. Mrs. Fishel gives public notice that she left the home of her father-in-law on account of intolerable conditions, and is willing at any time to make a home for her husband.

When Clayton Berkheimer and his son Clair were walking to their home late Friday night, near Hanover, a passing automobile struck Clair knocking him to the ground. Clair suffered cuts about his head. The machine which hit him kept on going and did not stop to give assistance and they could not learn who it was.

The automobile of Charles F. Reiding, Hanover, became enveloped in flames caused by the ignition of gasoline fumes when the owner of the car struck a match to locate something about the tank Friday evening, while gasoline was being put into the car at the Stokes garage. The flames were extinguished with the use of chemicals. Only slight damage was done to the paint.

The West Branch Seed Company, wholesale dealers in field seeds, has opened a branch office in Hanover.

E. J. Powers, executive secretary, will leave the Hanover chamber of commerce to become connected with the Genco Light Company.

Harry Kump, of Gettysburg R5, was admitted to the Warner Hospital with a badly lacerated head, the result of being knocked down by the fender of a machine while he was walking at the side of the Lincoln Highway near Hershey park, Friday evening. Kump in company with his brother, Clarence, were walking west at the side of the road. C. W. Kepner, of Mount Union, was driving in the same direction when, it is said, he became blinded by the headlights of an approaching car. He turned his machine off the concrete roadway at that time and the car struck Kump.

Placing so as to give the eastbound car place as possible, it is said. In going so, the fender of his machine struck Kump, throwing him heavily to the ground.

The corn contest, which started as a small affair two years ago and which last year grew to such proportions that it was taken over by the Adams County Farmers' association and the awarding done by State college expert, has opened for the third successive year. Several specimens are already on exhibition in the barn shop of F. V. Topper, McSherrystown, where they will be kept until the time of judging. A public meeting will then be held under the direction of County Agent Underwood when a talk will be given by a prominent agriculturist and the corn placed on exhibition in the Farmers' Bank building as it was last year. A ten ear contest will also be conducted. Those who entered single ear specimens are Adam Long, Mrs. Rose Murren and J. W. Keffer.

While en-route from Philadelphia to Harrisburg, Edward Fellows, of the former city, sustained a dislocated shoulder when the machine he was driving skidded from the Lincoln Highway, near Granite, and turned turtle Friday afternoon. He was admitted to the Warner Hospital and discharged. Rain which was falling practically all day caused the highway to be exceedingly slippery Friday afternoon.

The Ladies Mite society of Zwingle Reformed church and the Men's Bible class of the Sunday school held an early supper at the parsonage on Saturday evening, in East Berlin.

Rev. J. Harold Little, York Road, supply pastor at New Chester the past summer and a senior at Gettysburg Theological Seminary, who was granted license at the meeting of the West Pennsylvania Synod at its recent meeting in York, preached in St. Mark's church, Hanover, Sunday morning.

Upon the completion of the new brick factory building in West Hanover, the Eagle Broom Works, Chas. A. Spangler, proprietor, will have the largest broom factory within a radius of 200 miles of Hanover. The new structure is 48 by 55 feet in dimensions and four stories, including the basement.

Rev. Mark J. Smith, S. J., of New York, conducted a Retreat for the students of Mt. St. Mary's College, near Emmitsburg, Md., on Friday and on his return spent Saturday with his sisters, Misses Mary and Helen Smith, of Edgewood, his boyhood home.

At a meeting of the committee in charge of arrangements, it was decided to throw open the pig roast of the Adams County Republican Club to all Republican men and women in the county. The affair, to be held October 30 in the O. of I. A. lodge rooms, Gettysburg, is in charge of Dr. C. B. Stouffer, H. T. Stouffer, Edgar C. Moser, M. W. Klinefelter and S. J. Shaw.

Tonight Littlestown A. O. K. M. C. degree team association will hold initiation and have a feed for the members only.

This evening the new Straban township teachers' assn. will hold a public meeting at Woodsdale school house, at which time Dr. C. F. Sanders of the educational department of Gettysburg college, will deliver the address.

The first two non-resident hunters licenses issued in Adams county this year were taken out Friday in the office of County Treasurer Zinn by Harry and Claude Nusbaum, brothers, of Taneytown, Md.

Miss Martha McKay, superintendent of the Warner Hospital, makes public acknowledgment of the generous contributions of canned fruits, groceries, vegetables and preserves to the institution by the people of Adams county. Generous contributions were received from the Gettysburg, Bigler, Abbottstown, Arendtsville, McSherrystown, New Oxford and Littlestown Auxiliaries, the Superintendent said. A donation from the Hand-in-Hand Club, a colored organization in Gettysburg, was also appreciated, Miss McKay added.

Scott Hake, of Shiremanstown, one of the men interested in the shoe factory to be located at East Berlin, has bought a building lot from H. J. Sunday, and expects to erect a bungalow thereon in the near future.

The Red Mount church was re-opened on Sunday after extensive improvements.

Robert E. Wible, Esq., Gettysburg, was elected vice president of the Association of Directors of the Poor and Charities and Corrections of Pennsylvania at the annual convention of that organization in Williamsport, last week. Mr. Wible is solicitor for the Adams county board of directors of the poor. Adams county's delegation to the convention, Harry Stouffer, Steward, J. Edward Hall, director; Dr. Henry Stewart, physician, and Mr. Wible, returned home from Williamsport on Friday afternoon. The trip was made in Mr. Stauffer's machine. The 1924 convention of the State directors of the poor and charities will be held at Washington, this State. Robert C. Buchanan, of Washington county, was elected president for the ensuing year.

East Berlin garages report many auto sales. Lerew & Smith are receiving Fords right along in carload lots. The East Berlin garage also unloaded another carload of Chevrolets last week.

The Littlestown H. S. soccer team last week defeated the Hanover H. S. 1-0. F. M. Academy, Lancaster, recently defeated the former team 1-0.

Farmers' Day at Gettysburg, Thursday, was an ideal one, weather fine, exhibits numerous and premiums attractive. A Ford was the free-will gift of the business men of the town, and 50,000 tickets were distributed freely by the merchants to every one asking for them. At 4:30 the Square was packed with a mass of people to hear the winning number announced.

The stubs of the tickets had been collected in a barrel during the day and when they had all been well mixed one was picked out and it was announced that No. 43606 had won and the holder should step forward. J. William Kendelhart, teller at the Gettysburg National Bank, came forward with the right coupon, the only one he had. Lieut. Victor S. Strahm, adjutant of the Middletown Depot Flying Field near Harrisburg, gave an exhibition better than any before seen in Gettysburg, thrilling the crowds watching him.

Judge Ross, York, in passing sentence on defendants charged with driving automobiles while drunk, on Monday stated that this act is one of the worst crimes that can be committed, in that it not only endangers the life of the driver, but also everyone on the highway. An intoxicated driver, he said, is little better than a wilful murderer, and that the law will be so constructed that any intoxicated driver who causes the death of another person will be tried for murder. On such charges Rich. Fissel, Littlestown, aged 18 years, and John Trout, of York, appeared before the court and entered pleas of guilty. Each was sentenced to pay the costs and a fine of $200 and stand committed until costs and fines are paid. Fissel, it was told the court, was arrested in Maryland about a month ago on a similar charge.

In the criminal action brought against Charles B. Baum, of Penbrook, a traveling game protector, who was found guilty by a jury at the January term of wantonly pointing a pistol at J. Edward Hall, one of the directors of the Poor of Adams county, when Mr. Hall is said to have aimed to obey the game warden's command to halt, Judge McPherson in his opinion said: "We can find no substantial reason why the verdict of the jury should not stand. The motion for a new trial is therefore overruled and the defendant is directed to present himself for sentence on November 12."

The taking of testimony in the trial of Joseph Wise, Washington township, charged with criminal extortion in that he wrote threatening letters to Harvey Julius, demanding $2,500, was concluded before Judge Ross and jury Tuesday. At the conclusion of the commonwealth's testimony in this case, Samuel C. Malone, of Baltimore, an examiner of documents and handwriting experts with 27 years of experience, was called to the stand. He testified that he had examined the writing of Wise with that of the threatening letters sent to Julius and that in his opinion they were all by the same hand. The jurors reported that they could not agree, but they were directed to stay on the job, finally returning a verdict of no guilty.

DEATHS

Mrs. Kate Manuel, wife of Aaron Manuel, died at her residence at East Berlin, Wednesday evening, following an illness of a year, due to a complication of diseases, besides suffering a stroke that morning. She was aged 63 years. The funeral was held Sunday afternoon with interment in the East Berlin cemetery. She is survived by her husband and two daughters, Mrs. S. J. Resser and Myrtle Manuel, at home.

Betty J. Becker, daughter of Luther and Sadie Becker, Hanover, died on Friday from bronchial trouble, aged 6 months. Besides the parents a brother and sister survive, Mary Margaret and Ray Francis, at home.

Mrs. Howard Close died suddenly of heart trouble at her home in Westminster Friday morning, in her 45th year. She is survived by her husband and seven children. One brother, Emory C. Zepp, of Gettysburg, also survives.

After a brief illness of a complication of diseases, Jacob Himes died Sunday at his home near Biggins, at the age of 69 years. He is survived by his wife and two daughters, Mrs. Carrie Kauffman, at home, and Mrs. William Myers, Washington township. The funeral was held Tuesday at Altland's meeting house.

Geo. S. Shaffer died at his home, near Brysonia, Monday, after a lingering illness from a complication of diseases, aged 55 years. Surviving him are his wife, two daughters, Mrs. Leonard Shaffer and Miss Cora, at home, and two step-brothers. Interment will be made at Arendtsville today.

A coincidence developed with the death at noon Friday of Mrs. Margaret Ramer, of Gettysburg, a former resident of York. Her husband, the late Franklin Ramer, died on the same day exactly 27 years ago. After the Ramers left York almost 40 years ago they conducted the Globe hotel in Gettysburg. Mrs. Ramer's death was caused by dropsy after a lingering illness. She was 80 years old. She leaves the following sons and daughters: Charles F. Ramer, York; Louis Ramer, Hanover; Jacob and Andrew Ramer, of Gettysburg; Mrs. Sallie Bush, of York; Mrs. Charles Holtzworth, of Altoona, and Mrs. Elenora Toomey, Pittsburgh.

Without regaining consciousness, after suffering a stroke of apoplexy while on a pleasure trip with a party of friends, near Chambersburg, on Sunday, Charles G. Carbaugh, of Hanover, a retired blacksmith, died at the Chambersburg Hospital Tuesday afternoon, aged 65 years. On being taken into the institution he lapsed into unconsciousness from which he never recovered. Mr. Carbaugh was a son of the late Lewis and Amelia (Shilt) Carbaugh, and was born on the Carbaugh Homestead, along the Hanover-Littlestown pike. For many years he conducted a shop near Shilt's schoolhouse. He later moved to Mt. Pleasant where he conducted a shop until ill health compelled him to retire about six years ago. Last spring the family moved to Hanover. His wife survives with four children: Mrs. I. S. Brumgard, of Littlestown; Mrs. John T. Fuhrman and Clinton Carbaugh, of Pittsburgh; and Mrs. Paul Runk, at home; also the following brothers and sisters: Mrs. Samuel Carbaugh, of Hanover; David Carbaugh, of Kentland, Ind.; Mrs. Athalia Bair, of Sells Station; Maurice Carbaugh, Lewis, Pa.; Carbaugh and Wm. R. Carbaugh, of Hanover, and Mrs. Artie Wildard, of Baltimore.

Following a prolonged illness from a complication of diseases, Joseph Spangler died at his home, near Hanover, Md., Monday morning, aged 84 years. He was married to Miss Lucy A. Hoffman, a sister of the late Geo. Hoffman, founder of the Hoffman Orphanage, who survives with ten children, including Mrs. Charles Sterner of Gettysburg; Noah Spangler, of near the Hoffman orphanage; Mrs. William Little, of near Gettysburg; Mrs. John Staley of Littlestown, and Mrs. Cleatus Pitzer, of near Gettysburg; also one brother, David Spangler, near Littlestown.

WOMAN SENT TO HOME

Sarah A. Gotwalt, 24 years old, mother of two children, one of whom is less than two years old, who last week entered her plea of guilty to charges of larceny, receiving stolen goods and forgery, was sent by Judge Ross, York, to the Industrial Home for women, at Muncie, for not less than one year, nor more than three years. Her husband, Filmore O. Gotwalt, is waiting trial on similar charges and for breaking jail. Mrs. Gotwalt pleaded guilty to stealing securities to the value of almost $5,000 from Israel Kauffman, aged and blind, and his sister, Mary Kauffman, who live along the Lincoln highway, east of York. It is alleged that most of the money secured by Mrs. Gotwalt in her thefts and forgeries was given to her husband, who deserted her and went to Nebraska with another woman. He was arrested in the West and brought back to York. The two children of the Gotwalts, a boy and a girl, were placed in the custody of the Society to Protect Children and Aged persons.

James Reaver, 7-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Reaver, of Gettysburg, is suffering from a fracture of the right arm. The little fellow saw the distress of a playmate, little Catherine Moticka, when her gas balloon left her hand and caught in the branches of a tree. He climbed the tree to recover it for her, but fell when the light branch to which he was holding, gave way. The fracture was set at the Warner hospital.

Gettysburg and Villanova will stage their annual football contest at York on Saturday afternoon. Cumberland H. S. will play at Gettysburg on Saturday.

Approximately $140 was taken in Farmers' Day from the sale of tags for the benefit of the Warner Hospital.

Gettysburg Freshmen will be exempted from college regulations over weekends.

MARRIAGES

J. Albert Hoffman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Hoffman, of near New Chester, and Edna M. Mumper, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Mumper, of Dillsburg R5—were married at the Reformed parsonage, East Berlin, on Saturday week by the pastor, Rev. I. S. Ditzler.

Frank Cox, Jr., formerly of Anderson, S. C., now attorney for the Hanover Shoe company, residing in Hanover, and Miss Katherine Wright, of Morristown, Tenn., were married at Morristown, Wednesday, October 24, and following a three weeks' wedding trip, they will be at home in Hanover.

H. L. Sterner, of Gardners, has announced the marriage of his sister, Miss Hope Sterner, to Dr. N. Sherwood Ferris, Washington, D. C., in Luther Place Memorial church, Washington, D. C., Wednesday afternoon. Dr. and Mrs. Ferris will reside in the Capital city.

The marriage of Miss Ada M. Witte, of Highspire, and Roe H. Shetron, son of Mrs. Ella Z. Shetron, of Harrisburg, formerly of York Springs, was solemnized Thursday week at the parsonage of the Christ Lutheran church by the Rev. Thomas Reisch.

T. J. O'Neill, well known former Hanover manufacturer, who has been living in New York for the past four years, and Mrs. Marion I. Reposa, wealthy—New York society matron, were married in the Church of the Ascension, New York, Wednesday afternoon. At present Mr. O'Neill is head of a chain of silk manufacturing plants in the New England states. T. J. O'Neill is one of the best known textile authorities in the country. During the World War he was Chief of the Textile Division, U. S. Army. After the war he went to New York and has since lived there. The bride is the widow of a former member of the diplomatic corps.

Charles M. Mummert, Hanover, and Miss Esther M. Gotwalt, of Spring Grove, were united in marriage at the Grace Lutheran parsonage, Westminster, Thursday by the Rev. J. B. Ruple.

Geo. M. Straive, East Berlin, and Miss Cora A. Gerber, of Thomasville, were married by the Rev. Dr. C. W. Enders, Jr., Saturday, at Dr. Enders' residence in York.

Miss Corinne Hoffman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hoffman, of Hanover, and J. Milton Bender, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Bender, of Gettysburg, were married Tuesday morning at the Bender summer cottage along Marsh creek, near Gettysburg, by the Rev. Dr. C. W. Leitell, of Albany, N. Y., an uncle of the groom and president of the New York Synod of the Lutheran church. The groom for the past two years has been associated with his father in the undertaking business in Gettysburg.

Harry Heller, of Idaville, and Miss Nettie Shetter, of Biglerville, were married Saturday evening at the parsonage of the U. B. church, Guernsey, by the Rev. W. I. Kauffman, pastor.

LAD KNOCKED DOWN

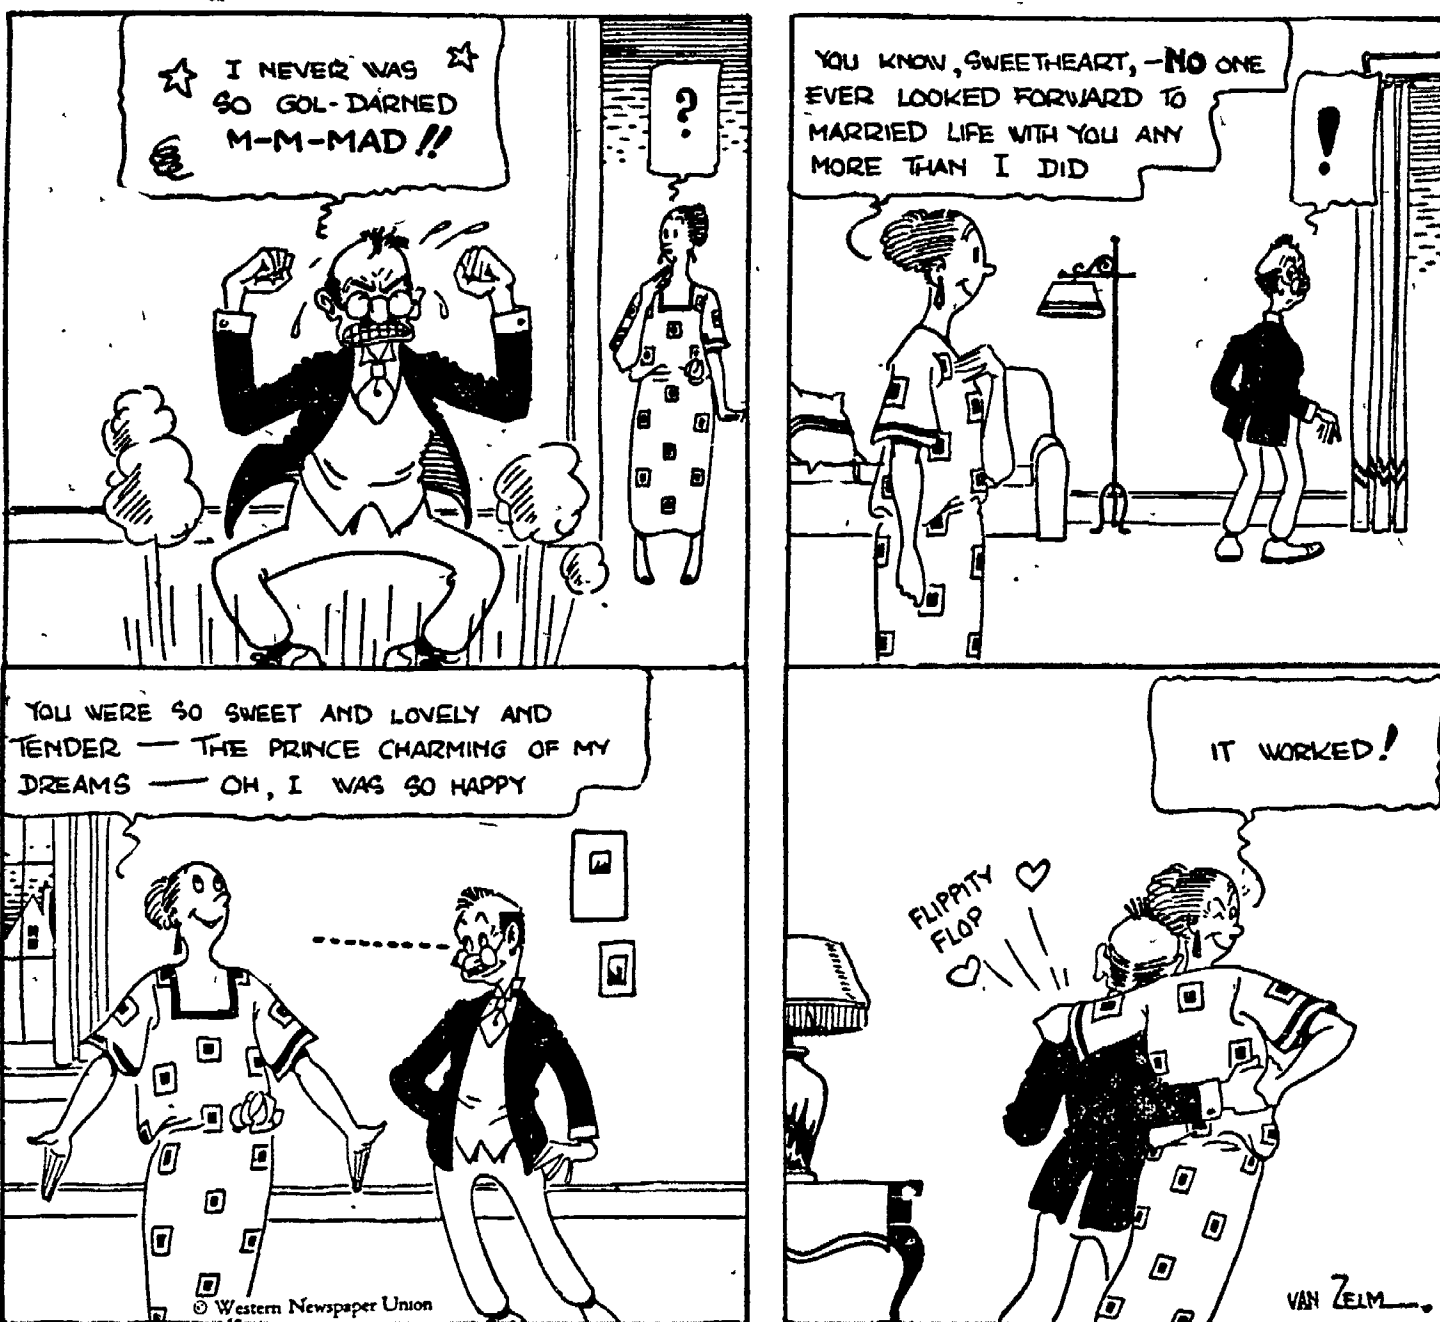

William Winters, aged 11 years, son of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Winters, residing on the Warner Blocher farm, just off the Carlisle pike near the Green Springs schoolhouse, was rendered unconscious Monday, at noon on the school grounds when run down by another boy on a bicycle. His head was injured somewhat, as were one of his hands and one of his legs, which were scratched considerably. Tuesday he seemed to be suffering no ill effects from the accident and at his

The SANDMAN STORY

THE LOST MOUSE

ONCE there was a white mouse who traveled with a circus. He had pink eyes and long white whiskers and he belonged to a clown. When the clown was walking about the ring of the circus he would pull the white mouse out of his pocket and let him run up and down his sleeve and pretend to be very much afraid of the mouse, and the mouse would pretend to bite his ear and they were very happy together. All the children used to laugh and shout when they saw the tiny thing on the arm of the clown, and the people in the back rows would crane their necks and try to see what was happening away, down below.

But one day the white mouse slid through a hole in the pocket of the clown's ragged coat and got lost. He looked and looked for his friend, the clown, but he could not find him, so he set out in the world for himself. He ran across the circus ring and frightened the big elephants nearly into fits, then he ran faster and faster along the sawdust ring and at last came to the edge of the tent under the rows of seats. Outside the tent was the great world which the white mouse had always wanted to see for himself.

The great world was so big that it frightened the little white mouse.

"My goodness," he said, "the sky is even farther away than the roof of the circus tent. Isn't that funny?" And he went on whistling to himself through his long white whiskers, to keep up his courage.

Before long he came to a house, though he did not know what it was. "What a queer brown thing, bigger than an elephant," he said to himself, stopping his whistle in amazement. "Now I wonder what's the use of that?"

He was a brave little white mouse, so he hurried to find out what the big brown thing was, for he had never been inside a house. Luckily for him there was no dog and no cat in the house, for he quite forgot to be careful. In front of the big brown house there was a big hole, which was a door, although he did not know it was a door. But he knew that holes could be gone through, so in he went.

Inside the big brown house there lived a family of very well-behaved mice, brown, all of them, who never made a noise in the walls at night or nibbled the loaves of bread in the pantry.

They were always on the watch for what was going on in the big house and so it happened they saw the white mouse just as he came in the door and they nearly tumbled over themselves in their astonishment, for they had never before seen a white mouse.

The brown mice crowded to the edge of the mousehole, peering at the white mouse and I expect they felt very much the way the poor Indians did when they saw a white man for the first time.

At last one of the bravest of them said: "I am going to speak to him, he has whiskers just like ours and a tail just like ours and eyes just like ours; maybe he fell in the milk pan and could not get it washed off."

"I don't believe that," said the sister of the brave brown mouse, her little nose wiggling in a funny way. "He looks white all the way through."

When the brown mouse who was brave enough to speak to the stranger said, "Can I do anything for you, sir?" in his very grandest manner,

THE UNWELCOME RAP

IN PERFECT fairness anyone has a perfect right to ring your front bell or knock at your door. An agent who comes to try to sell you flavoring extract may annoy you if he comes to call you to the door in the midst of a busy round of housework or when you are receiving callers, but he has really committed no offense. You owe him at least a definite but courteous refusal to buy.

There is always an effective way to dismiss an unwelcome caller without being rude. There are ways of rebuking admittance as effective as slamming the door in an intruder's face. If an agent comes and you feel that he is taking an undue length of time in stating the object of his call, you are entitled to interrupt him and ask courteously: "Will you please tell me briefly what I can do for you? I am very busy."

"I am sorry but I do not wish any," is a very definite but courteous way of dismissing the would-be sales person or you may add: "To detain you would only be wasting your time as well as my own, as I cannot make any purchases."

Sometimes housewives listen for half an hour to the glib speech of a persistent agent and then when at last the agent goes without having made any sales they blame, not themselves for having detained the agent and wasted their own time, but the agent. Now no agent ever really remains to take your time unless he feels that

MEN YOU MAY MARRY

By E. R. PEYSER

Has a man like this proposed to you?

Symptoms: There's the man who has made his pile. He is hale and hearty, restless and has retired from business. His mother thinks he has been an exemplary son. His sister has never gone without a thing that he could get for her. His small brother has had the careful care that only a big brother could give him. He is good looking, but appears unsatisfied. He believes he ought to get married. His spinster friends believe he should get married. Even his bachelor friends have prescribed marriage. He seems restless, even after proposing to you. He has spent his life in the closest application to work. You can't find anything in which he is interested. He tells you he is sick of baseball; golf is an old man's game; art is not in his line; cards he never liked and why should he take it up now? Reading is futile, for the books are so poor; hunting is a tax on a man of forty; and so on.

But at last he got over his fright and brown mouse persuaded him to come into his wall home and when brave brown mouse's sister told white mouse how nice it was to live there he decided he would not try to find his way back to the circus tent.

And so one night there was a wedding in the walls of the brown house and little white mouse and pretty little brown mouse set up housekeeping and some time you may be surprised by seeing a white mouse run along close to the wall of the room where you happen to be sitting, and if you do, perhaps it will be one of the children who looks like its father, little white mouse, who ran away from the circus tent a long time ago. "What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

FACTS about your name; its history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day and lucky jewel

CORINNE

CORINNE has been in vogue in America for so many years that her distinguished French origin has almost been forgotten. Seldom does a deliberately foreign name receive such welcome or such permanent popularity. The Greek is responsible for the earliest source of Corinne, the name coming probably from Persephone's title, "Kore," a maiden, which was applied to the Boetian poetess, who won a wreath of victory at Thebes.

But unlike many of the ancient favorites connected with the brightest lights of the old world, this name persisted and when ambitious writers, eager for a heroine, delved into early history, Corinna was salvaged and given into current use. Mme. de Staël created the brilliant Corinne, heroine of the novel of that name, and insured her immortality. French damsels beyond number adopted the name, while in Italy, Corinna appeared in an early chronicle of the Middle Ages, relating the story of the lady best known as Rowena, daughter of Hengist.

The war-hued carnelian is Corinne's talismanic stone. It will protect her against danger and disease and will give her courage and poise. It is said to be particularly lucky for those who sing, since it makes the voice sweet and strong. Wednesday is her lucky day and 1 her lucky number.

GIFT OF THE DESERT

CHAPTER XIV—Continued.

BY RANDALL PARRISH

Copyright by A. C. McClurg & Co.

With the instant all strength left Kelleen. The knife dropped from his fingers and he rested motionless, scarcely breathing, his eyes staring up into the dark. He had won; he was not seriously hurt, yet for the moment could not even realize his victory. Yet gradually he knew; the knife he had, wielded—the knife—he had killed the man. Whoever he was he had killed him; he lay there now beside him in the dark—dead. The very horror of it started anew the blood in his veins, that dead man lying there, motionless, becoming cold, with open eyes staring up at the tunnel roof. And he had killed him—killed him with the knife. Yet it had been a fair fight, man to man, and one of them had to die. He could breathe better now, and he sat up, trembling and shrinking back from contact with the dead body. He could not see it, but he knew it was there.

Kelleen struck a match, which gave forth at first a dim, spectral light between his trembling fingers, then glowed into a sudden flame. He thrust it forward over the body of the dead man, and stared down at the upturned face. For a moment not a muscle relaxed, his form that of a statue, as his eyes searched those ghastly features. Where had he seen the man before? That hairy face? Those long, misshapen arms? Dead! Of course he was dead—but who was he? Somewhere in his memory, dim, indistinct, clung a recollection which would not become wholly clear. Then the vision came, his lips uttering a startled exclamation.

"By G—d! I know now; it's Manuel Gomez! It's the ape-man!"

Manuel Gomez—the murderer, the outlaw, the dread scourge of northern Mexico, that bloodthirsty wretch whose crimes had made him an object of detestation on both sides of the line for years. Manuel Gomez, the killer of women and children, the destroyer of towns, raider, thief, bandit and insurrectionist—the ape-man! Kelleen had never seen him before, but he knew; there could be no other like that, and every story he previously had heard of the fellow came trooping back to his mind in vivid memory—cruel, remorseless, without mercy, hunted like a wild beast, yet ever escaping the tolls, he had left a trail of blood over all that land. Well, he was dead now! Yet how came he to be there? Was this his hiding place? or was the man there for some new crime? If so—what? And Bob Meager? Juan Sanchez? Were they also sharers in his villainy? Could they be members of this fiend's gang? Was it from here he led his hellhounds over the desert and plain?

The recurrence of these names instantly brought back to Kelleen a realization of his own peril. Gomez was dead, killed by his hand. Unwittingly, unknowingly, there in the dark, in desperate combat, he had avenged a hundred murders by the thrust of a knife. But these others—they were still alive; they would surely come. There could be no doubt of that. All that Deborah had told flashed across his mind—her encounter with this same Mexican ruffian—why, she had even described the fellow's long, ape-like arms, but he never once had thought of Gomez—of her creeping onward along the tunnel; the sudden change in its direction, and her stumbling over a dead body in the dark. He recalled the story of her escape, creeping up that narrow passage, through which she could barely squeeze her slender body; the firing after her from below, and her almost shot sent in return; then the desperate struggle which ended on the desert above. And what then? Meager, Bob Meager, going straight to that same hole and calling down for Manuel—using his very name?

Well, there was no Manuel now on guard there, but he could not face these other two alone, and they would surely be there by dawn at least. He arose to his feet, still dazed and confused, hardly able to tell directions, but driven by a wild impulse to escape, to get safely out of that silent blackness, that grave, in which he felt smothered and imprisoned. His groping fingers discovered a crevice in the stone, as though the solid rock had been rent asunder, a deep, irregular gash yawning the length of his arm. He even advanced a step into the strange fissure, wondering at its existence, tempted to explore its secret, when they came! He heard them pressing aside the vines and clambering to the top of the rock which helped conceal the entrance. They did this apparently without fear, with no impending sense of danger, and then dropped to the floor of the tunnel. There were two of them; he could tell that by the sound—Meager and Sanchez. But where, then, was Deborah Meredith!

CHAPTER XV

The Light Goes Out.

Kelleen waited in an agony of suspense, his thought with the missing girl, rather than on his own peril, or the nearness of those men groping blindly toward him in the darkness. That they were surprised, startled at not being greeted by Gomez was plainly evidenced from the first gruff utterance reaching his ears.

"Where the h—l is the fellow?" Meager exclaimed angrily. "I told you I called him from up above and got no answer. Now, by G—d! he isn't even down here."

no chance for his getting away without our knowing it. We had our men about here all the time."

"Your men!" Meager laughed scornfully. "Those greasers; they would only be playthings for Manuel. H—l, man! you and your gang couldn't even keep your eyes on 'Frisco'."

"He sure told me one d—n straight story. He seemed to know about all was going on. I'd heard a lot about him, knew he was a friend of yours, and supposed him all right."

"And spilled all you knew—d—n a Mex, anyhow."

"Well, ain't he?"

"Ain't he what? He ain't nothing just now. I did run with him a bit, of course, down below the line. But he wasn't invited into this game, and his being with Garrity was just an accident. At least I took it that way at first. Now I sorter reckon it maybe was all a put-up job. I ain't exactly made up my mind what the guy was up to—just suspected something was going on, and decided to butt in, I reckon. But, after he got out here snooping around, there wasn't nothing to do but put him out o' the way—specially after he stole your horse."

"I ain't so sure he stole your horse."

"What do you mean?"

"Just what I told you before. You're so bullheaded nobody can tell you nothing. I never did think that fellow you shot was alone. He was talking to somebody when we crept up—I heard him."

"Talking to himself, you never saw nobody but him."

"No, I didn't; he was up on that rock against the sky, but there might have been somebody else out o' sight on the ground. You was in such a d—n hurry to get to Casebeer, you wouldn't do anything else."

"Course, I knew the 'Kid' was alone, and after that tumble he took wouldn't bother no more. We had to get Casebeer's gang out of here before daylight."

"I don't know why. You haven't told me much. Why didn't you let the outfit go on? What did you want to unload the mules here for, and then send them back?"

"I didn't get any chance to tell you. It was after you left last night that I got the dope. That's why I had to ride out here myself, by G—d, on my wedding night." He laughed out loud.

"Say, Sanchez, there's some real girl, let me tell you. Think she's knocked me out; rapped me with a gun when I was drunk, and got away. D—d if she didn't, the little vixen. I've got to go back and show her what kind of a he-man I am when I'm sober."

"She got mad at you?"

"Rather that. I thought she was the soft sort, but she's a wildcat. Got me the first swipe, but she'll never find me so dead easy the next time. I'll teach her who's boss when I get this job out of the way. What was it you asked?"

"Why you stopped Casebeer?"

"That's what Garrity came to tell me. He'd got on to something. There's a leak somewhere. We couldn't get the stuff through tonight—a bunch of cavalry are up in Box canyon."

"H—l! What brought 'em there?"

"The judge didn't know. He got it from somebody at the post. The outfit started south, but that's where they were bound."

"You don't suppose they know?"

"Sure not—only suspect that stuff is being run through again along this trail. All we got to do is lie low awhile."

"No one has seen Gomez?"

"He hasn't put his head out of this hole. You haven't seen him yourself, Juan. Come on; he must be back in there asleep somewhere now likely. Keep one hand on the wall."

"Shall I strike a match, senor?"

"No, not here; wait till we turn the bend; then it will not show outside. Can't be long now till daylight comes."

Kelleen, silently pressed into the rift of the rock, the dead man at his feet, could mark the passage of the two clearly by the scraping of feet as they groped their way along the stone floor.

Following the opposite wall they would miss any contact with Gomez' body, and there was nothing he could do but stand and let them pass.

The two men had turned the sharp corner, the slight sound of their movements ceasing to reach his ears. Then the faint glow of a match reflected along the rock wall, the silence broken by Meager's voice.

"There's the lantern, Juan—in that niche, see. Here, turn up the wick."

The flame brightened suddenly, but the outer tunnel yet remained black. Only in the distance the light flickered along the walls, casting weird shadows. One of the men evidently held the lantern up, peering about curiously.

"He's not here, senor; where's the old devil, anyhow?"

They moved forward with the light, and Kelleen, all fear swiftly lost in his intense interest, crept on to the curve in the tunnel, from which point he could see their dim shadows. Behind him, but unnoticed, daylight began to be visible through the mantle of vines concealing the entrance. The dark figure on the floor assumed vague outline, the two men in the lantern glow came to a halt, thrusting the light forward, peering at the object which had attracted them. The Mexican identified it first in a sudden cry.

"It's a body, a dead man," he claimed. "He has been killed."

Manuel!

Meager held back, the cowardly cowering, but Sanchez bore the lantern forward, desperate to learn the truth. His startled voice came down the passage.

"It's not Gomez," he cried, "and no face I ever saw before. Perhaps you know the man?"

"No; but there has been a fight, or a murder—see, he has been shot; and in the back, by G—d! Gomez must have done this job. But what has become of the old devil? And who was this kid? What was he doing here? See if there is anything in his pocket. Juan. Give me the lantern."

He held it up, as the Mexican dropped to his knees, and began to rummage through the dead man's clothes. The increasing daylight of the desert found entrance far above, and stole down the narrow passage in a faint, ghastly glimmer, which only added to the ghastliness of the scene. The strain was too much for Meager's nerves, and he swore gruffly.

"Come on," he said fiercely; "bring the light. We'll search every inch of this d—d hole."

Kelleen turned, his first impulse being to escape, to rush toward that dim glimmer of light now plainly marking the cave entrance. Yet the futility of such an effort came to him instantly. There was a better way than that, and he whirled back to face them, as the two came cautiously forward, the glow of the lantern glimmering like a red star. The hand with the weapon in it fell to a level, and he fired, the glass flickering into a thousand pieces, the light instantly extinguished.

Kelleen's plan of action had formed swiftly in his mind. He had a glimmering of what this conspiracy meant, but must learn more. Only one method was possible—a confession from Bob Meager. The real secret of this tunnel was in his possession, now that Manuel Gomez was dead. He must be made to talk.

The advantages in this encounter were altogether on his side. He knew them, where they were; they possessed no knowledge of his exact position, who he was, or whether they faced one opponent or a dozen. They had been taken completely by surprise, startled by the sudden attack, confused in the darkness. He had both of them absolutely at his mercy.

The silence was intense after that first startled second. There was no movement, not even the sound of breathing audible. The two stood motionless, crouched back against the wall, peering into the blackness from whence that tongue of flame had leaped into their very faces, yet revealing nothing. They could neither think nor act. Who had fired—Manuel Gomez? some enemy who had trapped them? Were they facing one man, or a dozen? Confident of his own safety, realizing that he had the whip hand, Kelleen smiled grimly, every nerve tense, his revolver poised. The situation pleased him.

"Drop your guns, both of you!" he commanded sternly. "Quick now! I've got you against the light."

"Who the h—l?"

"Stop that! Drop them, or I shoot something besides a lantern. It's a hair trigger I'm playing with."

He heard both weapons fall to the floor, Meager cursing impotently, but the Mexican silent. Kelleen laughed.

"Kick them away from you—that's right! Not bad fellows when properly handled, I see. Now up with your hands, and back against the wall there."

He could not see the fellows, not so much as an outline of them, yet knew they obeyed the order. It was a bluff which worked because they half believed themselves silhouetted against that distant gray bar of light far down the passage, targets not to be easily missed. That cool, stern voice, unfamiliar in the echoing tunnel, meant business, rasped like a steel file on Meager's nerves.

"By G—d! Who are you?" he snarled savagely. "What the h—l do you want?"

"The first is of no importance, Meager," returned Kelleen with emphasis. "But I'll answer the latter question. Unbuckle your belt. Go on; I know what you're doing. Yes; take it off. I've got you boys covered; make one false move, and you'll sure taste lead. Now throw that belt about the Mexican—sure I know who you both are; I came here gunning for you two guys—around his arins—now, d—n you, draw it tight! Yes—that's exactly what I mean—strap them to his body."

Just what happened is not clear.

Kelleen could not see; he dare not take a step closer to make sure. The chances are that Sanchez had two guns at his waist. He had discarded one, but the other yet remained. Not certain that he was not outlined against the background of light, he dare not attempt to draw; but now, his hands lowered, as Meager drew the belt about his arms, desperate, bitter with hate, his fingers must have gripped the butt. With one convulsive effort he fired in the direction of the voice. The bullet struck the side wall, sent a splinter of rock tearing into Kelleen's cheek, yet, even as he staggered back, half blinded in the flame, he had glimpsed of the maddened Mexican, running blindly down the passage. An instant the fellow stood out clear, his hand thrust forward, his arms still held by the belt clasp; then Kelleen pulled trigger, and the runner sprawled flat, and motionless, into the very center of that little pool of daylight.

It was the swift work of an instant, then darkness, and Meager's huge bulk crushed Kelleen against the wall in one mad effort to kill. For a moment the smaller man, taken completely by surprise, struggled helplessly to escape the stranglehold of those clutching fingers. The revolver dropped from his hand, and he was forced resistlessly backward, strangled, unable to tear loose that viselike grip. As the two fell, however, Meager's head struck the rock, the sharp blow so dazing him as to permit Kelleen an instant of relief, a long, fresh breath, the release of one arm. Underneath him, pressing against his hip, lay the gun he had been forced to drop. With desperate effort he gained possession of the weapon, thrusting the muzzle savagely into Meager's side.

"D—n you!" he choked. "Feel that! Get up, or I'll blow a hole clear through you. You dirty brute, to kill you would be a pleasure. Get clear up! Do you know me now?"

The fellow, thoroughly cowed, shrinking back with the point of the revolver still pressing hard against his rib, stuttered, but made no reply. The widening radius of daylight gave Kelleen the outlines of his bulky figure, but features were invisible.

"What! not yet? I'm the 'Frisco Kid'! First you thought you'd double-cross me; then you decided murder would do the job best. Well, Meager, neither plan worked. I'm on to your game, and I'm very much alive. Now I've got you. Like to make a guess why I don't kill you?"

"You—you want me to squeal first."

Meager hesitated, and Kelleen's gun pushed harder.

"You better spit it out, Bob; I'd sure love to shoot."

"Well, d—n you, what's the difference? Garrity told me the fellow was hiding in here somewhere. Manuel Tracing Embroidery Patterns.

When you want to trace a pattern upon burlap or such material as Russian crash, especially when the material is colored, instead of using the usual transfer paper and straining the eyes trying to follow an almost invisible pattern, try basting the design firmly in place. Put white thread on the sewing machine and, making the stitch rather long, stitch the lines of the pattern instead of tracing them. When the design is complete, pull the paper away from the stitching, and a clear outline will remain, one that is simplicity itself to follow.

Bright shoes are being worn, not so much with white as with black costumes. A thin black dress is effected by chic women for afternoon, tea or informal dinner, and the bright shoes have their color repeated in a necklace of three or four bead bracelets.

Stenciled Walls Add to Appearance of Home

Colors for stenciling can be bought in various shades at almost any paint store. Get a short bristled brush and before painting starts, see that your colors are thinned as directed. Trim your stencils at the top and side if you are stenciling a frieze about the top of your wall. In this way you can get near the ceiling and into corners.

"By G—d! I know now; it's Manuel Gomez! It's the ape-man!"

Manuel Gomez—the murderer, the outlaw, the dread scourge of northern Mexico, that bloodthirsty wretch whose crimes had made him an object of detestation on both sides of the line for years. Manuel Gomez, the killer of women and children, the destroyer of towns, raider, thief, bandit and insurrectionist—the ape-man! Kelleen had never seen him before, but he knew; there could be no other like that, and every story he previously had heard of the fellow came trooping back to his mind in vivid memory—cruel, remorseless, without mercy, hunted like a wild beast, yet ever escaping the tolls, he had left a trail of blood over all that land. Well, he was dead now! Yet how came he to be there? Was this his hiding place? or was the man there for some new crime? If so—what? And Bob Meager? Juan Sanchez? Were they also sharers in his villainy? Could they be members of this fiend's gang? Was it from here he led his hellhounds over the desert and plain?

Jacket Blouse Is Gay Fall Fashion

Favored Garment Is Only Slightly Altered for Present Season.

One of the interesting aspects of the fall blouse fashions is the continued popularity of the jacquette, especially for autumn wear, observes a fashion authority in the New York Tribune. The jacquette was worn so extensively during the spring months that it might have been supposed to have had a brief and exuberant flowering and an early death. But such is not the case. It remains with us, but in slightly altered guise.

The sash has to a considerable extent disappeared, and where it stays it is of such soft materials as to make it possible to wear the jacquette under an outer garment. And in the majority of cases it has been supplanted by a buckle at the side after the style of buckles on dresses bearing the side-drape, or in some instances with an inconspicuous fastening of a deep enfolded belt. At this point the jacquette becomes almost indistinguishable from the costume blouse, which is expected to come into its own with the days of late autumn and winter when the coat suit, fur-trimmed and sumptuous, makes its appearance.

The keynote of the new blouses is opulence either of materials or decoration. There are blouses of duvetyne, cut velvet and crepes of the heaviest quality. The general lines are the same usually adapted to the straight silhouette, but a new note of Oriental luxury is found in such barbaric colors as Chinese yellow, used not only in embroidery designs but occasionally as a solid color. And there are brilliant and daring combinations of color in which yellow and red predominate, es-early civilization still dominate the mode. Fashion expresses in a thousand despotisms the Persian, the Byzantine, the Karomanian, Turkestan and peasant motifs. However, to one who looks more deeply than the casual observer, it is apparent that flower designs are fighting their way into favor. Flower colors—rose red, gentian blue—are much spoken of.

There are blouses made of silk so printed that they are almost legible. Designers say that at no time can they remember having such demands made upon them for new patterns. The colors are exquisite—an everlasting silken rainbow greets your eye.

Ribbon Powder Cases

Made in All Colors

As long as women powder their noses—and who among us cares to look upon them after they cease doing it?—they will carry powder cases, and it goes without saying that as long as they carry them they will continue to make them of ribbon. One of the very latest models is fashioned in the shape of a square envelope with the flap curiously adorned with rosebuds of gold-colored sealing wax and tiny ribbon rosettes in contrasting colors. These cases are made up in all colors, so that one has no difficulty in matching one's frock. Emerald green, coral and peacock blue are among the favored colors.

Gown of Orchid Ribbons

One of the smartest new importations in dinner gowns has a skirt made entirely of horizontal bands of orchid satin ribbon, and a straight sleeveless bodice so entirely covered with ribbon embroidery that it is almost impossible to see what the foundation material is. About half-way down the skirt a band of royal blue faille ribbon appears, encircling the skirt, holding in its fullness slightly, and culminating in two loops on the left side. Another band of the faille ribbon finishes the skirt at the bottom. A few spider web motifs are done on the ribbon with silver and gold threads.

VOTE FOR G. HARRY ROTH, FOR COUNTY PROTHONOTARY

There is a great responsibility upon every voter this fall, you should vote only for candidates who are efficient and capable to perform the duties of the office to which they aspire. No matter to what party they belong. Voters should forget they are Democrats or Republicans, everything being equal we should prefer the man already in office. If he has proven himself worthy, he will have had the experience, and the very fact that he has proven his ability in the past, gives us confidence as to his actions in the future, but aside from this there is another phase that is worthy of serious consideration, the knowledge gained by experience is of great value to the incumbent, and to you. It places him in a position to take up matters promptly and you get quick service. You do not need to be told what Mr. Roth will do, you know what he has already done for you, and he will continue to do so. If you value an honest efficient, active, fair and impartial county official, of Prothonotary, at the election on Nov. 6th, 1923, and you will make no mistake.
